A considerable number of people were inclined to critise the ladles who attended the Keith trial last Friday as being "out of their sphere." Doubtless the ladles disliked to be there as much as any man distiked to have them. But we noticed that a good many more reputable men at-tended the trial than might otherwise have been there so it was easy to get a good jury. And we noticed also that there was mighty little equivocation or evasion from the witness stand. It appeared to be a whole lot harder to be funny and try to dodge questions before a house full of women than it used to be before a house full of bums. And when the jury took the case it didn't joke about the verdict. Maybe the women were out of their sphere. But where is Shadder?

At the Grand avenue market the supply of horses were less than the demand, and the feeling was stronger on all grades. There was special inputry for good drivers, saddlers and extra heavy draft. The receipts in the mule department were better than of horses, and the market was active. The demand seem much the stronger for the 14% to 15%-hand mules, and they were quoted 22.50 to $5.00 higher per bond.
